

My phone rang night and day, at all hours. Since signing the do-not-call registry, there has been a great improvement, though some people still violate the rules. I do not need requirements eased so I will get more calls; I need them more stringent so I get none.

My phone is a private resource--I order it and pay all the bills. My home is my castle; it is a violation of my privacy to make solicitation calls to it.

If I want to donate money, I will initiate the contact. Likewise, if I want to make a purchase. It is time government protected the victim. And in this case elected officials can gain points without increasing the budget!

Mae Yanowitz